I am at a point in calculus where I am required to prove the fundamental theorem of calculus, and after some preliminary theory, I need to show that $\int_a^b f(x) dx = F(b) - F(a)$ I'm trying to avoid the use of integrals, I would like to show that the only difference between the two is the higher order terms. So I know that I can show that the functions evaluated at $x=a$ and $x=b$ are equal, and then I can show that the only difference is due to the higher order terms. I don't know how to show that the higher order terms only depend on the function evaluated at a and b . Of course, I could just plug in a and b but I am trying to see if there is an abstract way to show this. A: It turns out that this is a general fact. Let's just restrict to continuous functions (otherwise we could work with discrete functions of bounded variation, and then apply the fundamental theorem directly). If x_0 is a point where $f(x)$ is differentiable, then by definition $f'(x_0)$ is the slope of the function $x \mapsto f(x)$. If there is an interval $a < x < b$ such that $x_0 \in [a, b]$ and f is continuous on that interval, then $f(a) = f(x_0)$ and $f(b) = f(x_0) + f'(x_0)(b - x_0)$. The difference between the two functions is thus the sum of the integrals of f' over the interval $[a, b]$ (where there are no

The* package must be placed in the* We are building now the* package, that will be put inside the* package. At the time of this writing, you will get the jar file without any compilation for the minna-no-nihongo-api-loader.jar, not the javadoc (since that is not built as part of the build). You will get the javadoc as well as the source for the minna-no-nihongo-api-loader.jar, which you can then compile with JDK 1.8+. Alternatively, you can install from GitHub: `npm install -g minna-no-nihongo-api-loader` A silly error will be printed to the console, but you can just ignore it. If you want the.zip file, then just run the following in your command prompt: `cd ant javadoc` Then run `jar cfm minna-no-nihongo-api-loader.jar minna-no-nihongo-api.jar` You will then have the minna-no-nihongo-api.jar file with the API docs, the javadoc, the source, and the sample Java code. Notice that the javadoc is still empty because it doesn't build the API doc (and it won't, for the time being). GitHub Issues Please remember to use the issue tracker for bug reporting.
