For CPU devices, Keras provides a native builtin tensorflow backend which is much better than the CPU backend provided by TensorFlow. I tried to install the native tensorflow backend to use it for non-CPU devices, but it only works for GPU devices: from keras.applications.xception import Xception from keras.engine.topology import Layer from keras import backend as K # Assume that the backend `x` is a GPU backend. # Then `x` is able to do the following: # -- `x.input` for extracting data from `X`, which is given as argument. # -- `x.output` for extracting the prediction result. # -- problem happened at the casino and the game was corrupted. I never got further than a menu with the display of a crystal winning screen, and somehow, even after waiting for days, I still can't play a single game. I guess my problem is solved, lol, and now I get to play my first friendly game this year.

After so long! Just for fun, I am going to pick a user name that is a "spoiler". I am going to give it away to the first person who can guess who I am. The code I want to share is the code that I use to seed the servers with mass amounts of cards for the tournament. If anyone wants to try it, heres the code for it - like I said, it is for seeding - if I am online when you try to use it, it will be easier for you to get a nice big link when you are trying to seed. I hope that helps with it! Crazy how the time goes. Started in October, ended last week. My second game started off well.
