How to Edit Images Image Gallery How to Shoot/Edit Images Basic Quick tips Adobe Photoshop How to Shoot/Edit Images Basic Quick tips Adobe Photoshop Photoshop's layered editing system is the most fundamental difference between it and most other imaging software, but once you get used to it, all other programs can be easy to edit as well. Change a color tint or even create a new image in any program with Photoshop, but once you get used to its key tools, you may find that other programs are not quite as versatile. Photoshop uses the logical working area that is four layers by default that the user can break up into to add more. These layers are based on the color, type, and transparency of the image. If you've ever taken a photo and used a filter to change the color of your image, all you did was add the filter's effect to the color layer. If you want to actually keep using the color you have in the photo, you need to change it to another layer that will blend the color effects with the photo on top. Sometimes Photoshop will do this automatically when you add an adjustment layer to a photo, but this happens only if you haven't manually changed the color. In Photoshop, you can add multiple layers and add images to layers. You can place multiple layers over one another and add images or text to each layer. Use the layer tab to work with layers and select which parts of the layers should blend together. To add a layer to your document, highlight the menu bar and choose Layers and then Add Layer. Add new layers by highlighting the menu bar and choosing Layers and then New Layer. To change the color of your image, use the paintbrush tool, which is found by pressing the B key to toggle between brush and eraser modes. The brush tool can be set to a narrow selection or a wide selection, which makes it easier to paint on areas of the image and then erase unwanted areas. You can undo an edit with the Add Back button or with Ctrl + Z (Windows) or Command + Z (Mac). Colors and gradients will look different when the image is viewed onscreen because of different calibrations on different computers. Adjustments You can add color adjustments to your image with various tools. In the menu bar, Elcock's season comes to an end after first action of the new season Mick Elcock has called time on his season which hasn't gone to plan. The two-time Antrim footballer of the year has yet to get back to top fitness after his operation to repair a broken bone in his foot and that has put his season in jeopardy. The 31-year-old has been sidelined for more than a month after having surgery on his foot at Sunderland Royal Hospital in Sunderland. Last weekend Elcock played in a development match for Northern Amateur Football League side Keady before suffering a setback and has not been given the all-clear for the County Antrim FA Superleague season to start. Elcock, who has won four league medals and a Challenge Cup medal for Keady, was dropped from the Northern squad a fortnight ago and started last weekend's Antrim Cup win over Loughgall. "It's unfortunate the way it has gone," Elcock told The Herald. "It's taken me nine months to get back into full training and I got back to running and everything last week. "We were hoping to start the season on May 28. Unfortunately, last week was a setback. It was a minor operation so I have only missed a week and I was going to be all right. "But unfortunately, on the weekend I got my foot caught in a car door. I just hope I get my fitness back soon. "I had two operations and I never had a break. That was the problem for me. You can't really replace it. "I'm going to focus on getting back into training soon, playing for Keady and hopefully come back strong. "It will take a bit of time but I am sure I will come back strong." Elcock was in action for Keady last week as they beat Youghal 2-1 in the Ned Hanlan Cup. He came on as a substitute in the second half before having to retire with an injury.Q: Maximum in a non-empty bounded closed interval is attained. The tweets below from former IAS officer Azizul Haque give a clear idea. The BJP's 'Mamata Didi Turncoat' campaign is a reflection of its changing mood in the state. This is exactly what the NDA has tried to cash in on: a sort of cult. This is much more than just the word 'betrayal' - it is about a profound conviction that the BJP wants to make Bengal synonymous with the BJP and is ready to do anything to get there. This is the political script that this government is trying to enact, even at the cost of the state's fiscal and social fabric.
