psychology to 2014Photo: Jewel Samad/AFP/Getty Images During yesterday's Senate debate over the Supreme Court nominee, Senators Chuck Grassley and Al Franken were reminding us to the folks watching at home that a Democratic presidential candidate, Hillary Clinton, had called for the court-packing. Franken asked, You just heard Sen. [Amy] Klobuchar's endorsement for the court-packing plan. You had Sen. Clinton say, "I think what we need to do is expand the court, not eliminate it." And now we're hearing that, effectively, the strategy is to pack the court. Shouldn't that be opposed by all of us? Grassley, in response, said, "That's the first time I've ever heard of anyone saying they want to pack the Supreme Court." It's an odd way to describe a plan to increase the number of justices on the court, and it is true that, on the campaign trail, Clinton had stated a "liberal" goal of getting to 15 justices on the court. The rules for what counts as a "liberal" court are not clear — the late conservative justice Antonin Scalia, for example, was counted as a "liberal"
