Contents With their unique configuration of long forelegs and tapering rear ends, Antipoda are extremely agile and are known as the 'tap-ter' of the giant rat family. Their diversity across the world suggests they may have been independently created by a number of different 'hybrid' species, and while they make up the bulk of the humanoids in the novel, they serve alongside many of their humanoid relatives in various roles in society. Antipoda are developed from smaller species such as the one featured in the novel, and possess all the morphological characteristics that members of this species would have possessed as a result of 6d1f23a050
