similar to the old counter-strike, once you escape from a mission, the game will drop you back at the start of the tutorial or previous mission, but with the chance to assess your performance. there are two modes, survival and head-to-head (1v1). with the later, you can select from one of five player-made maps. what makes this game quite different from the old cz is that it gives you guns. and cool ones too. guns that reload every time you kill somebody, guns that have silencers, guns that expel a gas to distract your opponents, and even guns that blow up in your hands randy and various other cz2 developers are aiming to increase the level of diversity in the game as well, with the addition of tanks, just as in the original. additionally, the game will support the inclusion of a few real-time events in the form of train wrecks, bombings, and firefights. hell, i can think of a few amazing ways to use them all in a multiplayer map, and have been trying out various ideas for months to come. so we decided to take a look at a mission from the single player mode, which saw us have to infiltrate a munitions factory, kill the factory's boss, then escape with the boss' car, which had to be transported to a safe-house. i tried a mission from level 8 of the online mode, and can confirm that the car can be swerved from the outside, or even squeezed through small gaps, before being driven through the underground garage. the level was a combination of entirely scripted sequences and standard gameplay, with a little bit of tough stuff thrown in along the way, to keep you on your toes.
