the addition of auto-balance to the counter-strike: source game mode in version 1.3 of the game also required the implementation of support for localised bots to perform the function. this involved added support for bots which could take advantage of these power-ups in the form of a new bot class, which was added to the core engine. localised bots used the bot locator codes which were used for the anti-stealing mechanism of the game in order to reduce the chance of cheating being detected by detection bots. [11] it was possible to assign separate bot locator codes for each bot that wished to use it. this also allowed for each location of the map to have a unique anti-cheat code. [6] support for localised bots was backported from counter-strike: global offensive to counter-strike: condition zero where it was included as part of the bot system. [13] with the introduction of the player-controlled automanager in the release of version 1.4 of the game, various aspects of the gameplay were completely overhauled in order to make the automanager a consistent, reliable and featureful tool for players. support for the automanager allowed for various automation and automanager specific commands. this, for example, enabled the automanager to automatically place weapons in the right spot and for the automanager to know when to unload some rockets. [4] another benefit of the automanager is that players have the ability to seamlessly switch between controlling the automanager and controlling the player character, without any latency inbetween. [11] in the past, the game was also developed and released by valve for the xbox, while the goldsrc engine supports the xbox, windows pc, mac os x and linux. with the release of source 2 in 2013, the modding community was given the opportunity to again develop and release mods for the game. [19] counter-strike: global offensive includes many different weapons such as the ak-47, m4a4 assault rifle, g3a3 battle rifle and many others. in order to secure the game we provide the most suitable and highest quality alternatives to those weapons in the modding community. because many weapons are too easy to abuse, cs-go has provided the additional weapon hacking, which is a mod can be applied via the mod_hacking.ini file to make it much more difficult to abuse weapons. weapon_hacking.ini file is an additional mod available to the modders to increase the level of difficulty and make weapons more viable. the game includes a nine-person class system. the classes are: assault, medic, engineer, support, demoman, sniper, scout and operative. demoman provides one additional interaction point: the medpack. the medic's abilities allow the medic to create medkits and revive the demoman and the scout. currently working on the game are a lot of people, including internal testers who keep trying to find all the bugs. outside of that, we have a whole community of people who are building up the game. the biggest competition for counter-strike: global offensive is that in the first round of the competition, counter-strike: source, but so far, a lot of our competitors, we have defeated. 5ec8ef588b
