Non Conventional Gas-fired power plants account for more than 40 percent of total U.S. electrical generating capacity at 99.8% of generating units, and approximately 80 percent of generation assets operated by electric utilities, according to EIA data. Natural gas accounted for 77 percent of total generation in 2015. Electricity-producing power plants - primarily fueled by natural gas - are often seen as complementary to other types of power generation, such as wind and solar, which have been increasing in market share in recent years. EIA expects the percentage of utility-scale combined-cycle gas plants that started construction in 2015 to fall to 42 percent in 2016, mainly due to the timing of new construction projects and the weak U.S. natural gas industry. For 2016, EIA projects that the market share of utility-scale combined-cycle plants will be 37 percent, and that will reach 33 percent in 2020. The percentage of major electric power plants fueled by natural gas decreased from 40 percent in 2010 to 38 percent in 2015.
