A clinico-radiological study of 24 cases of non-ossifying fibroma is presented. All these tumours occurred in the mandible. Clinically they presented as a gradually enlarging mass with a smooth surface. Radiologically the tumour had a characteristic multilocular appearance with the inner layers showing very little or no calcification. Clinically and radiologically, these tumours resembled osteoblastic tumours. The course of the tumours was benign and none of these patients had recurrence after excision.Q: C++ Socket Program Exit How to Exit a Socket Program in C++? I am using PowerShell to call CMD that I need to pass a value to. My CMD script looks like this: @echo off set PATH=C:\Windows\system32;C:\Windows;C:\WINDOWS\system32;C:\WINDOWS;%path% cd \Program Files (x86)\Microsoft SQL Server\110\Tools\Binn\sqlcmd -S localhost -E -Q "select @@version" -r "C:\Users\John Smith\Desktop\SQL Execution Tool\update.exe" -i "C:\Users\John Smith\Desktop\SQL Execution Tool\update.ini" pause When the CMD script runs it sets the environment variable PATH to the correct location of my SQL install. My update.ini script looks like this: CREATE TABLE [dbo].[SQL_SERVER_NAME] ([SQL_SERVER_NAME] VARCHAR NOT NULL, [SQL_SERVER_NAME_VALUE] VARCHAR NOT NULL) ON [PRIMARY] Once the script executes my update.exe file it needs to insert the value for SQL_SERVER_NAME into the SQL_SERVER_NAME table. I have tried multiple ways to pass the value to the update.exe program including: set SQL_SERVER_NAME_VALUE=sqlserver5.live.com But when I run my update.exe file it doesn't insert the value into the SQL_SERVER_NAME_VALUE column. Is there a way to pass a value from a PowerShell script to a CMD script to one of the program's executable? A: This will work: (Get-Variable 'Path').Value You can also use -Value instead of the single quotes, but having the single quotes makes it much easier to see what you are doing. You could also get 79a2804d6b
