The good news: these apps are finally coming to non-Windows platforms. While I like Windows as much as the next guy, I've been yearning for an easy way to edit files on my iPhone and iPad. I naturally assumed that if Photoshop is coming to Android and iOS, Adobe should also be providing a Mac/iOS version. Adobe hasn't done that yet. A few more bug-fixes here and there. Most of the new features are available in the Beta testing software. However, you can easily install the new Photoshop and Lightroom software to get a fresh experience if you are not a CC subscriber. Does the new "Photoshop CC" Pricing Plan make you cringe? According to Adobe's announcement, Photoshop CS5 and Lightroom 2 will be available for Windows and Mac computers by the end of the year. Unfortunately, we cannot yet say if a new version of iOS will be released. Personally, I would expect to see an iOS version sometime towards the end of Q4. I am sure that this new iPhone app will be a very welcomed option for professionals since it includes batch processing, the Clip Studio Editor, and more.
