Reminders let you invite collaborators to review the document, and even set a notification when that review is done. You can also choose to share your snapshots when you save your file, or just edit it later. Share for Review makes it quick and easy to collaborate because reviews are immediately visible on your snapshots, so you can see how other designers are seeing your work. When you've addressed issues, you can easily revert to the state of the original file. All reviews are saved so you can continue to save and review as you continue updating the PSD. Pixelmator Pro 2.0 lets you easily edit multiple images simultaneously. This includes magic eraser tools, magic wand tools, marquee selection tools, and more. You can easily select an area of an image and use one of the magic eraser tools to clean up unwanted backgrounds. You can also use uncropped, full-resolution images. With proper cropping, uncropped images can be scaled to scale them to fit a flat surface. Making it easier to resize or fit artwork to a canvas or framed print. As Pixelmator Pro 2.0 becomes available, we'll be working on adding more features, including filters and layers. This can be slightly overwhelming because there are a few different Creative Cloud plans to pick from according to what your area of interest is. To make things simple there are 3 different options that you will have to choose from that include Photoshop. First the 'Photography' plan which is $9.99/mo and grants you access to Adobe Photoshop and also Adobe Lightroom which is a program that allows for detailed photo editing. This is a great value considering the second option is $20.99/mo for use of only Photoshop. The third and final option which I think is the best option is the Student and Teacher plan that is $19. You've got it. You've already done all of the above and you've noticed the common disadvantages to it all. Why keep using all of these or why do we still need to shoot with these tools?
