Why is seeing a piece of art moving or entertaining? The great thing about a trip to a museum or gallery is that it offers kids the opportunity to make a connection with works of art, as well as other people. Music therapist Cindy Jacobson and assistant Julie LeDuc use the arts to help children of all ages work through issues related to the environment, such as bullying, peer rejection, and sudden changes in the home. Art therapy is a recognized form of treatment for childhood issues such as anxiety and depression. It's also a great way to meet new people and increase socialization skills. We encourage families to spend time together and connect in one of Boston's many public art museums. Art therapy at Boston Children's Hospital Cindy Jacobson is a music therapist who uses music to improve the quality of life for children. Jake has extensive experience in the area of music therapy, having practiced at Roosevelt Hospital and the Massachusetts General Hospital. Julie LeDuc is a talented visual artist who specializes in oil painting, watercolors, and graphic design. She has worked with Boston Children's Hospital and its guest artists since 2001. For children who have been hospitalized for at least three days, Julie puts on informal art-therapy sessions during which children are encouraged to create artwork. She can also use that artwork to write
